This is your temporary home; please keep it safe for everyone.

TORNADO PROCEDURES

The following is a list of procedures to follow in the event of a tornado:

1. Seek shelter immediately!
2. Use in-place sheltering.
3. If a basement is available use it: if not, go to the lowest floor possible.
4. A central room such as a closet is best.

5. Hide under furniture and stairwells and cover your head.
6. In a vehicle, get out; do not attempt to outrun the tornado.
7. If no shelter is available, take refuge in a ditch or a ravine; or lie flat on the ground and cover your head with your arms.

TORNADO WARNING: Means a tornado has been sighted or detected by radar and may be approaching. SEEK SHELTER IMMEDIATELY!!

SIGNAL: You will hear a 3-to-5-minute steady tone over the base siren. This is the same signal used in the civilian community.

AFTER ACTIONS: Determine if everyone is all right. IF exiting the shelter beware of severe damage, such as live power lines down or gas leaks.

The safest area to go to in case of a tornado if staying in the Main Building (3200) is a 1st floor stairwell. TLF residents should take cover in the bathroom.

509th Bomb Wing Emblem

Since 1952, the 509th has proudly displayed its one and only official heraldic device – the wing emblem (or patch). The 509th Bomb Wing's emblem is rich in history. The shield is like a family coat of arms and uses symbols to tell its story. Each symbol on the shield represents some part of our unique past.

First, the Air Force wings represent the branch of service: but the wings are not in the familiar outstretched position. When the ancient Greeks approached a stranger, they raised their arms with the palms outward to show they were carrying no weapons – a sign of peace. The 509th obtained special permission to display the wings in this configuration to show that it, too, comes in peace.

Wings with an official motto are required to display it in the scroll of their emblem. The 509th has an official motto. The motto, "Defensor Vindex" (Translated: Defender avenger) means that its mission was, and remains, to protect and retaliate for any infringement on that peace. The atomic cloud burst represents two things: the fact that the 509th dropped the only two atomic bombs ever in wartime, and that it still uses atomic power as a deterrent to war and defender of peace. Finally, the eldest son symbol (the red tripod) shows that the wing is the oldest atomic-trained military unit in the world. Members of the 509th are indeed the inheritors of a proud legacy. Properly wearing and displaying the wing emblem enhances our spirit de corps and unit identity.

A Brief History of the 509th Bomb Wing

509th Composite Group

The 509th bomb Wing, one of the most famous wings in the Air Force, traces its historical roots back to its World War II ancestor, the 509th Composite Group (however, technically speaking it is the 509th Operations Group and NOT the 509th Bomb Wing that literally and linearly descended from it). During World War II, the Army Air Forces (AAF) formed the Group with one mission in mind: dropping the atomic bomb. It was activated on December 17, 1944, at Wendover Field, Utah under the command of Col Paul W. Tibbets, Jr.

The Group made history when, on August 6, 1945, the B-29 Enola Gay piloted by Tibbets took off from Tinian in the Northern Marianas Islands, flew to Japan, and the bombardier, Major Thomas Ferebee, dropped the world's first atomic bomb (Little Boy) on Hiroshima. On August 9, 1945, the Group once again visited the Japanese mainland, and Bockscar piloted by Maj Charles W. Swenney dropped a second atomic weapon (Fat Man) on the city of Nagasaki. Within days of the nuclear strikes, the Japanese sued for peace, ending the war.

Upon returning to the United States in late 1945, the Group settled into Roswell Army Air base, New Mexico, where it became the core of the newly formed Strategic Air Command (SAC). In May of 1946, the now-called 509th Bombardment Group (Very Heavy) again traveled to the Pacific where it participated in the Operation CROSSROADS nuclear tests. On July 1, 1946 "Dave's Dream" piloted by Maj Woodrow P. Swancutt dropped the Able atomic bomb on an armada of 73 obsolete and captured naval vessels moored off the Bikini Atoll.

The 509th Bombardment Wing at Roswell 1947-1958

On November 17, 1947, SAC activated the 509th Bombardment Wing (Very Heavy) at Roswell (renamed Walker Air Force base in 1948), assigned the 509th bombardment Group to the wing, and bestowed the group's honors upon it. The group's and the wing's mission was to carry out strategic (and if necessary, nuclear) bombing missions using their B-29s. For a brief time in 1947 and 1948, the 509th F-51 Mustangs and F-84 Thunder jets also operated from the attached 33rd Fighter group (whose mission was to escort the 509th bombers). Within five years, however, the Air Force inactivated the 509th Bombardment Group (eventually re-designating and reactivating it as the 509th Operations Group in 1993). Meanwhile, the wing carried out a new concept in September 1948, when it added air refueling capability, first with KB-29M hose-type tankers, and eventually with B/KB-29P boom-type aircraft. In 1948, the wing also re-designated as the 509th Bombardment Wing (Medium).

In June 1950, the wing began receiving B-50D Superfortresses to replace the B-29s, and in January 1954, the KC-97 aerial tanker replaced the aging KB-29s. Next, the wing entered the jet age in June 1955, when it received the first all-jet bomber, the Boeing B-47E Stratojet. In the early 1950's the wing deployed three times to England and once to Guam for show of force and deterrence missions.

Pease AFB, New Hampshire 1958-1990

In August 1958, the 509th moved its personnel and equipment to Pease AFB, New Hampshire. There, the wing continued to function as an integral part of SAC, maintaining its strategic nuclear alert mission. In 1965, the wing's last KC-97 was transferred to the 100th Bomb Wing, and SAC scheduled all B-47s in the United States Air Force for retirement (the process began in 1961). Initially, this retirement also included the 509th Wing, itself, as well. Fate intervened, however, as SAC changed its plan and decided to keep the 509th alive. It was re-designated as the 509th Bombardment Wing (Heavy) and equipped with B-52 Stratofortress bombers and KC-135 Stratotanker refueling aircraft in 1966.

The wing's association with the B-52 included two major deployments to Andersen AFB, Guam, as part of the now famous Vietnam War ARC LIGHT missions. Operation ARC LIGHT was the specific name for the deployment of B-52s as conventional bombers from US bases to Guam to support ground combat in Southeast Asia. By extension, ARC LIGHT also became the general term for uses of B-52s as close air support (CAS) platform, and most ARC LIGHT operations involved attacks on enemy base camps, troop concentrations, and supply lines. In April 1968, and again in April 1969, the wing began six-month ventures in the Western Pacific where almost all of its B-52 force, much of its tanker fleet, and over 1,400 operations, maintenance, and support personnel were deployed. During the last deployment, SAC informed the 509th it would soon receive FB-111A fighter-bombers. Accordingly, in late 1969, the 509th gave up its B-52s, and again re-designated as the 509th Bombardment Wing (Medium). After a year of performing only refueling operations and FB-111 ground training, the 509th began receiving the new fighter-bombers in December 1970.

Over the next two decades, the 509 BMW excelled in its mission of providing top-notch nuclear alert forces, as demonstrated by winning the SAC Bombing and navigation competition and the Fairchild Trophy in 1979, 1981, 1982, and 1983. However, a decision by the Department of Defense in 1988 to close Pease would change that status quo. That year, Congressman Ike Skelton announced the B-2 Advanced Technology Bomber would be based at Whiteman AFB, Missouri, and the 509th Bombardment Wing would become the USAF's first B-2 Spirit Wing. On September 30, 1990, Headquarters SAC inactivated the 509th and transferred the non-operational wing to its new home at Whiteman.

Whiteman AFB and the B-2 1990-Present

Several new developments occurred to the wing while in this "hibernated" state. On September 30, 1990, the wing went back to its old designation as the 509th Bombardment Wing (Heavy), and on September 1, 1991, SAC changed the wing's name to its current designation, the 509th Bomb Wing. Another change occurred on June 1, 1992, when the Air Force disestablished SAC and the 509th became part of the newly created Air Combat Command (ACC).

On April 1, 1993, the Air Force returned to the 509th to operational status and personnel and equipment were again officially allocated to the wing. The wing grew still further on July 1, 1993, when it accepted host responsibilities for Whiteman from the 351st Missile Wing.

On July 20, 1993, the wing received its first fixed-wing aircraft in almost three years, a T-38 complete with a B-2 style paint job. Finally, on December 17, 1993, the first operational B-2, named "The Spirit of Missouri," touched down on the Whiteman runway. Not only did the date mark the 90th anniversary of the first powered flight by the Wright brothers, it also fell on the 509th Composite Group's 49th anniversary.

Over the next few years, the 509th continued welcoming B-2s into its inventory. By early 1998, the wing had received eighteen B-2s, and eventually would operate as many as 21 of the high-technology bombers. The 509th also ushered in 1997 with an historic event, when it was declared ready for conventional operations. On April 1, 1997, the wing achieved Initial Operational Capability.

Throughout its history at Whiteman, the B-2 has always been at the forefront of America's national defense. The inaugural B-2 combat missions were flown on the first night of Operation ALLIED FORCE, March 24, 1999. The Spirit of Mississippi and the Spirit of Pennsylvania employed the 2000-pound variant of the GBU-31 JDAM (Joint Direct Attack Munition), the Air Force's newest GPS-assisted weapon. This mission was also the combat debut of JDAM. The B-2s combination of its unique survivability and amazing bombing accuracy truly marked the first time when the fundamental calculus of air combat changed from the number of sorties required to destroy a target, to the number of targets that could be destroyed by a single sortie. In all, during 78 days of ALLIED FORCE missions against Serbia, 49 B-2 combat sorties were launched from a recovered at Whiteman AFB, MO. Forty-five of these sorties reached their target and 652 JDAMs and four GBU-37s were dropped. The round-trip missions lasted 28 to 32 hours. Amazingly, the B-2 flew less than 1 percent of the combat sorties but dropped 11 percent of the total bombs.

On October 5, 2001, two 509 BW B-2s departed Whiteman and flew combat missions in support of Operation ENDURING FREEDOM (OEF), America's response to the terrorist attacks on September 11th. Crews flying The Spirit of Mississippi and The Spirit of Louisiana launched from Whiteman and flew sorties lasting 43.5 and 43.2 hours long, respectively. After each aircraft dropped bombs in Afghanistan, the crews went on to land at a forward operating location. There, they conducted engine running crew changes and returned to Whiteman on 8 October 2001, following sorties lasting 29.6 and 29.3 hours, respectively. A few days later in the campaign, The Spirit of America, flying a similar flight profile, accomplished the longest combat sortie (73.3 hours) in the history of the USAF to date.

March 21, 2003, was the first night of Operation IRAQI FREEDOM. For the first time in history, B-2s launched from two different locations and struck targets in the same area of responsibility. From Whiteman, the Spirit of Missouri led a three-ship armada including the Spirit of Louisiana and Spirit of Arizona. From their forward operating location, the 393rd Expeditionary Bomb Squadron launched the Spirit of Pennsylvania, Spirit of Georgia and Spirit of Mississippi. Crews destroyed 92 targets in the opening hours of the "Shock and Awe" air campaign, and nearly 600 targets in all. B-2s were responsible for dropping more than a million pounds of ordinance during the air war against Saddam Hussein's forces.

On December 17, 2003, the 8th Air Force Commander, Lt Gen Bruce Carlson announced the B-2 was now Fully Operational Capable. The announcement came at the 10th Anniversary gala commemorating the delivery of the first B-2 to Whiteman.

On Feb. 1, 2010, the 509th Bomb Wing at Whiteman AFB became part of the newly created Air Force Global Strike Command. In addition, since its move from Saint Louis in October 2008 and its accompanying transition from an F-15 to a B-2 unit, the Air National Guard's 131st Bomb Wing has been increasingly integrated into all phases of the 509th Bomb Wing mission. The partnership is now recognized as a model of Total Force Integration concept and most major operations, inspections, evaluations and competitions are conducted as part of a combined 509th/131st Team.

The wing's pre-eminent role in the projection of American military power was again demonstrated in March of 2011, when B-2s from Whiteman struck targets in Libya as part of Operation ODYSSEY DAWN. During the 25-hour mission, crews employed 45 JDAMs against hardened aircraft shelters, destroying the planes and helicopters inside and preventing Muammar Qaddafi from using his air force against his own citizens.

The last few years have seen continued success and resulting recognition of the outstanding performance of the 509th Bomb Wing. The 509th / 131st Team won 3 out of the last 4 (2010, 2012, 2014) Fairchild Trophies recognizing the Best Bomb Wing in the AFGS Global Strike Challenge Competition. In 2013, the 509th also earned the castle Trophy as Outstanding Bomb Wing in the 2013 AFGSC Operational Awards, as well as the USSTRATCOM Omaha Trophy in the Strategic Aircraft Operations Category (the wing previously won the Omaha Trophy in 2006).

Thus, the 509th Bomb Wing, with its long and illustrious past, continues to beckon others to 'Follow Us' as it continues to prove its famed World War II slogan, "Non Finer than a 509'er!"
